

Scolmore specified for new boutique hotel

The quintessentially British, seaside town of Southend-on-Sea welcomed the opening of its first luxury boutique hotel in December, Seven Hotel. Following a £4million investment, the new four-storey, 37-bedroom, luxury hotel, opened on Clifton Terrace, overlooking the seafront, and products from Scolmore's Deco® wiring accessories range were selected to meet the high specification requirements of this prestigious new hotel.

Switches and sockets from the Deco® range have been fitted in all the hotel bedrooms and an antique brass finish was chosen to compliment the style of the interior décor, which was worked up by award-winning designers, renowned for their contemporary yet timeless concepts.

Deco® is a range of decorative metal wiring accessories and the Deco® brand has become synonymous with high specification, high quality, long life and unprecedented value.

Kevin Tench, director at Total Electrical Ltd, was responsible for the electrical installation and commented: "This was a really interesting project to work on. Each of the bedrooms is a different shape and size, so required different quantities and locations for the plugs and sockets. Deco® is a high quality range that looks really good in situ and the antique brass finish chosen works perfectly with the overall interior theme."
